

The world needs more integration for peace, democracy and development.
At PartnersGlobal, that's what we do.

Globally, citizens, governments, and businesses are working to create peaceful change, inclusive democracy and sustainable development, but their efforts are disparate and disconnected.

We bring global and local changemakers together for greater collective impact by channeling the right resources, harnessing momentum, and building collaboration. We serve as a catalyst, helping to transform the way individuals, communities, businesses, and institutions come together cooperatively for a more peaceful, inclusive, democratic and prosperous world.

Our Story

The PartnersGlobal story begins in 1989. The downfall of communism in Central and Eastern Europe left a political and social vacuum, which attracted a flood of foreign donors who imposed short-term training programs and external policy recommendations on the newly democratic societies. PartnersGlobal took a different path. From the start, we committed to building partnerships and working with local leaders and institutions to create sustainable democratic change and build a strong civil society.

For 30 years, we supported local civil society activists as they created independent conflict transformation organizations in their countries, hubs for inclusive peace, participatory democracy and sustainable development. These organizations, known collectively as the Partners Network now span 20 countries.

Today, PartnersGlobal is still in the business of transforming the way we collectively approach building a more peaceful and democratic world. Our programs across the globe bring diverse actors together—government officials, civil society leaders, activists, bilateral donors, security forces, international organizations, and business, among others—to work more effectively together for lasting social change.

Whether we're working to address corruption or resolve violent conflict, as an integrator, we build bridges among these groups for a common purpose. This approach amplifies our impact and helps to ensure the conditions and relationships are in place to support lasting transformation.
